* Since the Evangelical Friends Church in Rwanda (the owners of Friends Peace House where AGLI is based for work in Rwanda) is focusing on the three areas of Kigali, Ruhengeri/Musanze and Kayonza, it was decided to work with Batwa in a resettlement village near Kayonza rather than in Cyangugu as originally envisaged. The Twa are more numerous in Ruhengeri district so more activities were done there.

Extract from report of Introductory Debates

The first debate gathered 45 participants, and the second also. For these debates, participants were all present at the time of starting. Participants were excited to hear about the activities which are going to be done for them, one of them said “we’ve heard from others in Batwa group saying that they’ve come in workshops and that it was good to them, especially to find that there are other people who think about them, and who are trying to make them understanding about their problems and trauma that they faced, and still facing.” He said “come to train us, we are ready to attend the workshops” also that they are interested to hear about the new activity which is Growing Together. Nyiramana Solange and Kanira Joseph, HROC facilitators

Extract from report of HROC Basic workshop

The agenda of the workshop is the same as the one we use for the basic workshop, but as we mentioned in the previous reports, it’s a challenge for us (facilitators) to deal with time, as participants want to talk about their sadness stories, and want to express themselves, at every time. As the workshop progress some participants had to come out with the ideas which are: “It’s not often to find us in a room gathering like this one, also we are not given this opportunity to talk about ourselves, like talking about what traumatized us, how feel with the life we live now, and maybe what to do, in order to see ourselves as real Rwandans...”
Kayitesi Marie Rose, Maseruka Tharcisse, Nyiramana Uwase Solange

Hamissi: As one of the group of those who have been left behind by history, I used to be in isolation, no one take care of us, we couldn’t think that there could be someone thinking of us, but there are people who think of us and the difficult time we passed through, until now, they know how much we are traumatized. I feel comfortable after this workshop, I take decision now of approaching other people who are not from our group, and share with them what I learned from this workshop.

Narrative summary from Growing Together workshops

Musanze

We conducted 2 groups of 2 workshops, each with Day 1 in Musanze Friends Church and Day 2 in a hillside village. We followed the same pattern each time, starting with revision of the HROC teaching on trauma, trust and mistrust, good listening and healing. Thinking about the fruits of good and bad nutrition led into the value of vegetables for nutrition, and the practical assembly of a demonstration sack in the pastor’s garden behind the church.

Returning to the pastor’s garden for the second pair of workshops, we found seeds already sprouting

On Day 2 the team of 2 or 3 facilitators traveled by taxi-bus(es), by moto and/or on foot to the home village of our group of students. There we supervised the planting of four more sacks by groups of five students to each sack, gave out different kinds of locally purchased seeds, and told the students they would all be expected to have acquired and planted a sack by the time of the follow-up in November.

Nyiramajambere Esperance, from the second group, spontaneously offered the following words: 'In the first workshop on trauma healing I learnt to recover from my inner wounds. Now your teaching about vegetables and how to grow them will help me heal my outer wounds.'

Kayonza

We conducted 2 consecutive workshops in the remote resettlement village of Kageyo, in Kayonza district, where Batwa, moved from their traditional part of the country, live adjacent to other groups such as released prisoners, genocide survivors, and Rwandans expelled from Tanzania.

Kageyo village, new and remote

The workshops followed the same pattern of HROC revision, teaching about nutrition, and constructing demonstration sacks, as at Musanze.

Nyiramana Solange, HROC facilitator, spoke at the beginning of the second day with the second group. There had been serious arguments, unresolved when we left the day before, about which of 5 participant in each group should have the sack at their house. 'There is a connection between the tree of trust and planting cooperatively. Giving the sack to one house is not the end of the process but the start of helping each other from house to house. You're building trust when you show your needs and feelings. To be good neighbours we have to help each other. Think of this work as planting the tree of trust for our new life here together. Remember, working together is the first way to build trust. We can't do anything alone.'

Participants' testimonies

Nyiramajoro Angelique: When we first moved here it was not easy for us and we're still not familiar with the area. As time goes by we're starting to feel human like other Rwandans as we work on activities. This new activity will improve our health - our children's and our own.

Mukampfizi Esther: We were wondering what kind of seminar we would be getting and God sent you with this one on vegetables. ... This is the first time we've seen packets of seeds. We knew the vegetables but not how to grow them. Now we've learnt from you we'll work hard and the harvest will be good for our health.

Evaluation

Part way through the first year, it seems rather early to be spending time and money on external evaluation. Activities are up to schedule and feedback is positive. Participants consistently ask for further training in both parts of the work.

Accounting

Here is Dave Zarembka's spreadsheet for AGLI's HROC/GT project with Twa in Rwanda. The £6000/$9000 from QPSW has already been spent and other AGLI funds will be used to complete the scheduled events.

Outline request for QPSW Relief Grants funding for 2011

We have got off to a good start with this ambitious project in 2010. As we hear and read participants' requests for further training, all of us concerned in delivering the project are beginning to make choices between possible ways forwards for the next year or two. We plan to put in applications for 2011 and 2012.

After the scheduled follow-up sessions, we will be in a better position to select appropriate pieces of work for next year. The main outline will be to do some level 2 HROC trainings, and to take the practical and theoretical work on diet and nutrition further, encouraging those who have been trained to pass on the techniques and knowledge.

HROC facilitators and senior staff at Friends Peace House in Kigali are anxious to bring other groups of Rwandan society into the work: the participants ask for that, and FPH is clear that working exclusively with the one group can perpetuate the divisions we want to eradicate.

Here are some possibilities set out by Dave Zarembka, AGLI Coordinator, in early November:

1. Like last year AGLI has some funds for this project--perhaps in the order of $4000 which would be in addition to $9000 from QPSW.
2. One of the objectives could be to integrate the Twa with the Hutu/Tutsi through doing advanced HROC workshops with the mixed group.
3. AGLI programmes in Rwanda have also included AVP and mediation when funds have been available. Mediation will help the Twa to solve their problems and conflicts which arise in their communities, and they could also be included with other Rwandans in peacebuilding.
4. AGLI will be doing an international HROC training in Burundi next August and we could include 4 Twa to become HROC facilitators. This would cost $600 each plus travel money ($50 each).
5. Friendly Water for the World is proposing teaching the Twa (and others) to make Biosand Water Filters (from sand, gravel, and cement) and form associations to produce and sell them. They would fund the teaching part of this activity and we could focus on developing the necessary social confidence and skills. Elizabeth also wonders if the Twa could make coolers ('Zeer pots') to sell, to a proven design, building on their traditional occupation as potters.
6. There should be some kind of continuation of the growing vegetables/nutrition part of the work. Participants can then be encouraged to sell vegetables.
7. Do we want to expand to other Twa groups such as the one in Cyangugu?
